The Facade Tectonics Institute (FTI) is a member-based organization. A core component of the Institute's mission is providing unique and significant value to our members. We promote the Institute and its membership through the provision of premium technical resources and information to the building marketplace. We achieve this through a strategy combining independent research with high niche market visibility and top level promotional capability. The Institute's membership is a broad-based coalition of individuals and organizations, bridging the building profession, industry, academia and ownership, and involving a great diversity of building types, systems, products and materials. Consequently, while aggressively promoting its membership, the Institute remains explicitly independent of the commercial interests of its membership and does not engage in the protection of the vested interests of any of its members. Rather, the Institute's mission involves accelerating the evolution of building facade technology in support of a resilient and sustainable built environment, to the benefit of its entire membership and all of humanity.
